

Econ 970: Econometrics Student Workshop

Spring 2017

Course Number: ECON 970

Day/Time: Thursday 9:30-10:45 am

Location: 208 Caldwell

Professor: Ju Hyun Kim

Office: GA 302

Office Hours: By Appointment

Email: juhkim@email.unc.edu

Grading:

Presentations 70%

Participation 30% (attendance, comments, questions)

Target Audience: Graduate students in the Econ Ph.D. program who have completed their field paper and are engaged in dissertation research in econometrics

Course Goals:

The goal of this workshop course is three-fold: First, it is for each student to get feedback on his or her own research and presentation skill from multiple faculty members and cohorts. Second, it is for students to improve their ability to organize thoughts and to discuss their own and others' research in the seminar. Third, it is for students to learn presentation skills as well as good research skills from others.

Course Requirements:

All student participants are required to present at least once each semester. Each participant will be assigned dates based on research progress and job market plans. Student participants should also actively ask questions and provide comments on the presentations of their cohorts.

Final Exams:

There is no final exam in this course.

Course Policies:

Regular attendance is expected and will be accounted for in the assignment of grades.