Greetings from the Stanford Economic Review, Stanford's only undergraduate economics publication!

For almost a decade, we have published incredible empirical research papers from undergraduate students across the globe, serving as a medium to amplify the voices of some of the world's brightest minds. Since 2021, our publication has also been accepting qualitative pieces about modern economic issues for the commentary section of our website.

We have officially started accepting submissions for the Winter 2023-2024 issue of our research journal - the application deadline is December 15, 2023. As for commentary submissions, we will review these pieces on a rolling basis throughout the year, so feel free to submit at any time! Commentaries may take the form of either "short-form" (500-1000 words) or "long-form" (1800-7500 words) articles. Please see the "Submit" section of our website (<https://stanfordeconreview.com/>) for more details about the submission requirements, and please reach out to us at stanfordeconreview@gmail.com if you have any thoughts, comments, questions, or concerns. We look forward to reviewing your work!

Impact Investing Fund Recruitment - Student Opportunity (flyers attached)

The Impact Investing Club Fund (IIC) at UNC is a community of undergraduate students dedicated to furthering the practice of impact investing through education and application. Impact investments are any investments made with the intention to generate positive, measurable social and environmental impact alongside a financial return.

Our goal with the Fund is to make a positive societal change while helping our members develop hard skills like data and portfolio analytics, word processing, and soft skills like communication, interpersonal intelligence, and leadership. All of which prove valuable in investment management and other areas of study as well. We have a large alumni backing and many dedicated advisors and partners. We also have several impact investment funds at other student run organizations at the undergraduate level across the country.

We are opening up recruitment for this semester with events over the next couple weeks. See flyers for details:
